PORTFOLIO UPDATE

During the month, higher than expected US inflation (CPI) print at 8.6% (on 10 June 2022) nudged the Federal Reserve to deliver a surprise rate hike of 0.75% (against indication of 0.50%) and increases the chances of front-loading of rate hikes. This led to sharp increase in interest rate outlook (with 10-years US Treasury Rate peaking around 3.47%); which in turn, fueled fear of early onset of recession, resulting in pull-down of longer-term interest rates, resulting in 10-years US Treasury retreating to settle at 3.13%, a month-on-month increase of 0.39%. It also resulted in widening of corporate bond spreads, with Bloomberg Emerging Markets USD Aggregate Average OAS spread widened by 31bps, and bonds being beaten down.

As a result, the Fund suffered MTM (mark-to-market) loss of 3.53% during the month (YTD -8.79%) as compared to Bloomberg Emerging Markets USD Corporate and Quasi 1-3 years Index being down by 1.41% (YTD -9.20%) and Bloomberg EM Asia USD Credit Corporate Index being down by 3.46% return (YTD -15.34%). About 69% of the MTM of the Fund was contributed by higher quality (Investment Grade) bonds.

The Fund continues to be conservatively positioned with circa 86% investment grade securities with short duration of 2.29 years and is optimally positioned to benefit from increased prevailing yields.

DIVIDEND UPDATE

The Fund has paid Thirty-Sixth Quarterly Dividend of US$ 0.75 per share on Distribution Class Shares. All investors holding Distribution class shares on Friday, 24th June 2022 (Dividend Record Date) have been paid dividend.
