PORTFOLIO UPDATE

The month of April, witnessed markets shrugging past Russia-Ukraine conflict, and China supporting its economy by marginally lowering the interest rates and reserve requirements; making Chinese and Russian securities, along with Cambodian securities, being the top three positive contributors to the fund NAV.

Most of the developed economies were rattled by inflation, resulting in US Treasury widening by circa 0.40% across the curve and the market pricing Fed rate hike of 2.50% in 2022, with 50bps rate hike in May along with start of balance sheet unwinding.

This resulted in drop in prices of bond, especially the longer dated bonds, with Bloomberg US Investment Grade Index being down by -4.07% (YTD -12.73%), with relatively lower duration Bloomberg US High Yield Index being down by -2.70% return (YTD -8.22%) and Bloomberg Emerging Markets Index being down by -2.83% (YTD -13.15%). Even equities sold off, with S&P 500 being down by -8.96% (YTD -12.92% YTD) and Nasdaq down by -12.92% (YTD -21.00%). Led by China, Bloomberg EM Asia USD Credit Corp Index marginally appreciated by 0.17% (YTD -11.26%). Against this backdrop, the Fund portfolio appreciated by 0.08% with the short-dated bonds setting-off the decline in relatively longer-dated bonds; however, post leverage, fees and expenses, it declined by -0.09% (YTD -13.57%). Sectorially, Consumer Non-Cyclicals (led by Adani Ports) and Energy (led by Pemex) were key distractors while Consumer Cyclical (led by Nagacorp) and Communications (led by Veon) provided some support.

The market expects inflation to have peaked in March and awaits Fed projection on forward inflation. The Fund would continue to benefit from its better quality and short duration than most indices; with its elevated leveraged yield enhancing fund's performance.
